

From 1944-1946, the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) was the only federal agency that was authorized to investigate and report on the activities of the Communist Party in the United States. The FBI was the only federal agency that was authorized to investigate and report on the activities of the Communist Party in the United States.

The constitution of the United States, however, does not give the government the right to investigate and report on the activities of the Communist Party in the United States. The constitution of the United States, however, does not give the government the right to investigate and report on the activities of the Communist Party in the United States.

The constitution of the United States, however, does not give the government the right to investigate and report on the activities of the Communist Party in the United States. The constitution of the United States, however, does not give the government the right to investigate and report on the activities of the Communist Party in the United States.

The constitution of the United States, however, does not give the government the right to investigate and report on the activities of the Communist Party in the United States. The constitution of the United States, however, does not give the government the right to investigate and report on the activities of the Communist Party in the United States.

The constitution of the United States, however, does not give the government the right to investigate and report on the activities of the Communist Party in the United States. The constitution of the United States, however, does not give the government the right to investigate and report on the activities of the Communist Party in the United States.